

First look at the upcoming Michael Jackson biopic has been released, and it recreates one of the singer's most iconic outfits. Michael Jackson's nephew, Jaafar Jackson, plays the King of Pop in "Michael," which releases in theaters on April 18, 2025. The film is now in production. Jaafar Jackson takes the stage and recreates his uncle's iconic "Man in the Mirror" look from his Dangerous Tour from 1992-93 in the first-look photo. The movie "will bring audiences a riveting and honest portrayal of the brilliant yet complicated man who became the King of Pop," according to the logline. "The film presents his triumphs and tragedies on an epic, cinematic scale — from his human side and personal struggles to his undeniable creative genius, exemplified by his most iconic performances. As never before, audiences will experience an inside look into one of the most influential, trailblazing artists the world has ever known."
