

On November 29, Turkmenistan's Deputy Prime Minister Bayramgul Orazdurdyeva presented a proposal to President Serdar Berdimuhamedov at a government meeting to create a new scientific electronic journal on medicine and innovations by the Turkmen State Medical University named after Myrat Garryev. This was reported by the electronic newspaper "Turkmenistan: Golden Age."

The Deputy Prime Minister noted that the publication will be available in Turkmen, English, and Russian languages and will be published twice a year on the corresponding website. This will ensure broad access to the journal for a wide readership. The journal will feature articles by Turkmen and foreign professors on theoretical and practical issues of medical and preventive work, phytotherapy. Additionally, it will present achievements in improving the national healthcare system and innovations in global medicine.
