

At the education, science, and culture department of the Russian Embassy in Turkmenistan, a Russian language competition for foreign citizens has begun. Participants have 45 minutes to complete more than ten tasks, including a creative one.

All tasks were developed by specialists from Naberezhnye Chelny State Pedagogical University (Republic of Tatarstan, Russia). The competition will run until December 28. Winners will be awarded diplomas.

Russian teachers have prepared 14 diverse tasks for the contestants, one of which is creative. According to its conditions, the participant must write an essay on a free topic of at least 300 characters.

As the second secretary of the diplomatic mission, Kirill Voronkov, said, this is already the second such competition.
