

Lux's message received over 21,000 retweets and 100 million views, with many criticizing her for using complex jargon.

An analysis of two centuries of academic writing revealed a consistent trend towards using more obscure language. Critics argue that this makes it harder for scientists to communicate their ideas to a broader audience, potentially "isolating academic circles from the public."