

San Francisco-based Anthropic is known for its Claude family of language models, which compete with OpenAI's GPT. The company is actively attracting investments to expand its computing power and strengthen its position in the race for advanced AI developments. The recent deal with Google came shortly after it was revealed that Anthropic is in talks to raise $2 billion in a new funding round.

Google and Anthropic are collaborating on creating innovative AI solutions, as evidenced by existing agreements and funding. Among the major investors in Anthropic is also Amazon.
