

One of the reasons for the decline, analysts say, is the absence of new artificial intelligence (AI) features in China that Apple introduced with the launch of the iPhone 16 in September 2024. These features, including text processing assistants and image generation, are not yet available to Chinese users. This is because the company continues to seek local partners to implement AI tools in the country.