

Zuckerberg complained that Apple “hasn’t invented anything outstanding for a long time”

Zuckerberg also criticized Apple’s business practices, particularly the 30% fees the company charges developers in the App Store. He stated that these fees are used to compensate for declining iPhone sales. He noted that Apple restricts access to certain iPhone protocols, mentioning Meta’s unsuccessful attempt to integrate its Ray-Ban smart glasses with Apple’s connection standards.

The Meta CEO also dismissed the $3500 Apple Vision Pro headset, calling it inferior to more affordable Meta devices priced between $300 and $400.
