

Yandex will present its largest update to Alice in seven years in mid-April.

The main theme of the conference will be the development of the virtual assistant. Thanks to new technologies and the use of neural networks, Alice will be able to assist users with an even greater range of tasks—from everyday to professional. Details about the updates will be revealed during the presentation.

In addition to updates to the assistant itself, Yandex will showcase new smart devices that have not yet been released. These include new models of Yandex Stations, TV Stations, smart home devices, and automotive solutions. Leaders from various divisions will discuss the technologies they are working on and present prototypes. These innovations are planned to be released to the market this year.

The conference will take place in Moscow, but anyone can watch it. The live broadcast will begin on April 15 at 12:00 Moscow time on the official conference website.