

Fans of the Apple TV+ series “Severance” can now immerse themselves in the mysterious world of Lumon Corporation thanks to the limited edition MDR keyboard from Atomic Keyboard. According to CNET, this replica of the blue keyboard from the Macrodata Refinement department is available for pre-order—but it comes with a twist.

The keyboard, featuring 73 keys, an aluminum body, and an MDR logo, mimics the design of 1970s terminals but lacks an Escape key, symbolizing the “inescapability” of Lumon employees.

It is equipped with mechanical switches for tactile typing and a built-in trackball, just like in the show. This keyboard is ideal for fans wanting to recreate the atmosphere of the series or retro-tech enthusiasts. The price has not yet been announced due to new tariffs in the US, but signing up for pre-order notifications on Atomic Keyboards’ website will allow users to receive details first without a commitment to purchase.
