

In Turkmenistan, the last bell ceremony was held for graduates of the Joint Russian-Turkmen School named after A.S. Pushkin. This significant day is one of the brightest and most memorable moments in students' school lives, symbolizing their transition into adulthood.

On this occasion, a festive assembly was organized at the school. During the event, the Ambassador of Russia to Turkmenistan, Ivan Volynkin, delivered a congratulatory speech, wishing the students great success in their new life journey. He also expressed gratitude to the school's teaching staff for their dedication and hard work.

“The last bell is a special feeling for every student—a time to reflect on years spent together with parents, friends, and teachers. On this day, graduates bid farewell to their school and take their first steps towards new goals and dreams.

May your new journey bring great achievements, joyful moments, and creative discoveries!
May all your dreams come true and new opportunities open up for you!”
