

Apple again turned on the news and water in iOS 26, but there is a nuance

In the new beta version of the iOS 26, Apple again turned on the function of the AI-vocabulary of notifications for news applications. Previously, it was disconnected, since AI incorrectly retold the headlines.

After installing the update on the screen, a message will appear with the choice - whether you want to receive brief notifications. If you choose the category of "news and entertainment", the system will warn: "A retelling can distort the meaning of the original. Check the information." It is also indicated that the function is at the testing stage and errors are possible.

In addition, the update improves the visual elements of the Liquid Glass - they have become more "liquid" and transparent. Apple continues to experiment with the design.

It is expected that the public beta iOS 26 will be released in July. That is, it is not so long to wait.
