

Huawei Mate XTS will be more expensive than the iPhone Fold - $
2780 against $ 1999 by Apple

Huawei is preparing to launch its most expensive smartphone - Mate XTS with a triple fold.

According to information from China, the novelty will be presented on September 12 - literally on the same days when the premiere of the iPhone 17 line is expected.

According to leaks, the Mate XTS can go out at a price of about 20,000 yuan (about $ 2780), which makes it noticeably more expensive than the first folding iPhone - his analysts were estimated at $ 1999.

This raises the price bar for ultra -playing folding devices focused on technology fans with a large budget.

Mate XTS will become a Mate XS successor, but will offer a more complex design. The device, according to rumors, will receive a more durable UFG glass, satellite communication support and will be released in the colors of Mystic Black, Auspicious Red, Crimson Purple and Bright White.

Against the background of rumors that Samsung is also working on a similar cot, the race for the market of flagship folding smartphones is clearly exacerbating.
