

Motorola is preparing for the sudden return of the cult model of the Moto 360 smart watch, reports Android Headlines.

The current version of the device should be released in 2025. This is indicated by leaks with the images of the clock and the information that the project is engaged in the Motorola itself, and not a third-party contractor, as was the case with the 2021 model.

Moto 360 (2025) will save a round display, but the design will become more sophisticated. The case will receive a grinded metal finish, a rotating crown and an additional button, like OnePlus Watch 3, will appear. Five color options are expected.

Phonerand

A key intrigue is a software platform. The novelty can abandon Wear OS in favor of the proprietary Moto Watch OS – a lightweight platform with an emphasis on energy efficiency.

However, the interface on flowing renders resembles the brainchild of Google, which, as it were, hints at the possible partial integration with the search giant ecosystem.