

Zephyr showed a video card with large fans in the Radeon VII style

The Zephyr brand showed the design of a new video card inspired by Radeon VII. Judging by the images, this is a model with three fans, and large 102-mm impellers are used.

Despite the fact that the Zephyr design is very similar to the classic Radeon VII, especially in gray, but the video card itself can be both on the AMD RX 7000 base and RTX 40xx - the brand did not specify.

We also note that Zephyr traditionally releases its video cards with a delay in relative to AMD and NVIDIA. For example, recently they presented RX 7600 XT exclusively for the Chinese market.

Given this, a new card with large fans will probably not appear on sale soon and will be available only in China.

Unlike modern maps with aggressive "gaming" design and an abundance of backlight, the Zephyr concept is closer to the strict and minimalist style of more classic models.