

According to rumors, the next model of the folding Huawei Pura X will be wider than the original

The Phonearena portal spoke about the upcoming model of the Huawei Pura X series. According to fresh rumors, the next model may be wider.

The name of the new model is still unknown – maybe Huawei Pura X2. According to the latest insider information, the new model will be wider than the original. When she comes out, it is still unknown, but possibly at the end of 2025. Insiders consider information from some sources strange, because Pura X came out in April 2025.

Perhaps the new model will have a folding screen of 8. "This is more than the original Pura X, which has a 6.3 screen." It is also noted that the Pura X forms in a more convenient format compared to many other folding smartphones -16: 10. This makes this device better for watching a video, because the screen is smaller than black stripes and the picture looks more exciting.

Observers emphasize that this phone works longer without recharging. Usually folding phones have problems with the size, which is why they do not have a large battery. Pura X solves this problem because the screen screen is wider, and this allows you to put a battery of larger capacity. The Huawei Pura X battery is 4700 mAh, which is almost 20% more than that of the Samsung Galaxy Z Flip 6 (4000 mAh). In the new Galaxy Z Flip 7, the capacity was increased to 4300 mAh, but Pura X still has more. In general, the material emphasizes that the next smartphone Huawei Pura X, whatever it is called, will be wider, which means with a more capacious battery and other advantages due to an improved form factor.