

Android Authority insiders said that earlier the Google Keep notice application, which had previously been updated, has recently become more convenient for users. Now in the "Notice" a function of sorting notes has appeared, for a more obvious organization of information.

So far, the sorting is not available on all devices. Probably, in the near future, the new functionality will be expanded to more devices.

To turn on the sorting, you will need to click on the search badge on the main screen screen.

After that, the menu with three options will open: manual sorting: the user will be able to independently drag notes and change their order, sorting by the date of creation: notes will be displayed in the order in which they were created, sorting by the date of the last change: notes will be shown from the latest to the oldest.