

Huawei is preparing a premium version of its future flagship – Mate 80 RS. According to insiders, a smartphone can get a titanium frame and a ceramic rear panel.

The design of Mate 80 RS, judging by the leaks, will be upheld, but the materials used in the Mate 70 RS Ultimate Design will be preserved. Last year's model had a brilliant titanium frame and a ceramic case with a golden reflection. In the new generation, "more sophisticated" lines are expected and, possibly, a new color.

In addition to appearance, attention is paid to the screen. The smartphone will probably receive a 6.9-inch two-layer OLED display, already familiar with the previous model, but with improvements. The main intrigue is a new technology of a telephone object. According to rumors, the camera in the Mate 80 RS can be even better than that of the Pura 80 Ultra flagship.