

Google shares have grown by more than 3% after the message that Apple is negotiating the possible use of Gemini and the Gemini and updated Siri vocal assistant. Apple is interested in creating an individual version of AI.

So far, Google plans to make Gemini a standard Android help assistant, and its capabilities go beyond the scope of Siri, including video and work with text, photo, video and voice.

Rumors of negotiations can also be associated with the risks of Google for their profitable "search transactions" with Apple. This month, the US court must make a decision on charges of Google's monopoly on Safari search engine.