

In honor of its 50th anniversary, Microsoft introduced a limited series of crocs in Windows XP. Shoes are made in sky blue with a green sole-just like the famous wallpaper for Windows XP.

Unique jibats are attached to each pair: MSN, Internet Explorer, scraper and mouse cursor. Also in the kit there is a backpack-mech with the same design. The cost of the pair is $ 80, and at first the crocs will become available to Microsoft employees on pre -order.

The author of Android Authority admitted that he now dreams of Croxes in the style of Android. He offers to make green crocs with android figures, the icons of old Nexus phones and even a QR code on the strap.

Now fans are waiting for Google to pick up this idea.