

Samsung introduced Galaxy Buds3 Fe for $ 149 with Galaxy Ai support

Samsung has announced the new Galaxy Buds3 Fe wireless headphones, which will go on sale in the United States on September 4 at a price of $ 149.99.

The model will be available in black and gray and received a number of noticeable improvements compared to Buds Fe. The main innovation is Galaxy AI support.

Headphones will be able to work with voice teams and provide real -time transfer through the InterPreter application. However, all functions will be available only in conjunction with Galaxy smartphones. You can use them for free until the end of 2025.

Galaxy Buds3 Fe is also distinguished by the new Blade Design and updated sensory controls with support for gestures of pinch and piles. The battery life will be up to 6 hours with active noise reduction and up to 8.5 hours without it, and the charging case extends this time up to 24 and 30 hours, respectively.

Samsung promises improved noise reduction, stable switching between devices and a clearer sound when calls thanks to Crystal Clear Call technology.
