

The government will allocate 1.8 billion rubles for the development of the Far Eastern Federal District and the Arctic

The Russian government will allocate more than 1.8 billion rubles to support the social development of economic growth centers in the Far East and in the Arctic.

This was announced by the head of government Mikhail Mishustin. According to him, financing was increased by 1.5 billion rubles for the Far Eastern regions and by 300 million rubles for the Komi Republic. The funds will go to the implementation of the master plan of Ulan-Ude, the repair of the branch of the National Center "Russia" in Vladivostok, the reconstruction of Tolstoy Street in Korsakov, repairing the ring road in Vorkuta, the purchase of ambulances and the creation of a school quantorium in Usinsk.

Mishustin noted that these measures are aimed at improving living conditions and the development of tourism. "We expect that such measures will help to reveal the potential of the regions, improve the conditions for the lives of our citizens and make them more attractive for tourist trips," Mishustin emphasized.
