

In Khabarovsk, they will open “School 21” from Sberbank to prepare IT specialists

Sber and government of the Khabarovsk Territory signed an agreement on the creation of school 21 in the region – an educational platform in the field of digital technology. The project is aimed at preparing IT specialists for the needs of the local economy.

School education will be free and affordable for all citizens over 18 years old. For admission, it is necessary to undergo a multi-stage selection that includes online testing, video presentation and intensive 26-day basin course with the study of the basics of programming.

The curriculum provides for the development of demanded programming languages, including Python, Java, C ++ and others. Particular attention is paid to the development of soft skills: work in a team, time management and communications. Training is built on the principle of “equal equal”, where students exchange knowledge and jointly implement projects.

An important part of the process will be a three -month internship, during which most students receive employment proposals.
