

A few days before the presentation of the iPhone 17, the head of Apple Tim Cook will visit the White House again. According to The Hill, he will become a participant in an event dedicated to artificial intelligence, which will hold Trump.

The meeting will be held in an updated Pink Garden of the White House and will collect about two dozen famous business and technology representatives. Among the invited is Mark Zuckerberg, Bill Gates and Sam Altman.

This time the topic will be the future of artificial intelligence and its role in economics and technology. Before the meeting in the White House garden, a separate event on the topic will be held, which will be held by the first lady Melania Trump.

It is curious that this is the second meeting of Cook with Trump for a month. In August, he gave the president an unusual present - a piece of glass on a gold stand, symbolizing glass production plans for the iPhone in Kentucky.