Every year on December 10, the global community observes International Human Rights Day. This date commemorates the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations General Assembly in 1948, which laid the foundation for modern principles of freedom, equality, and human dignity.

In 2025, events focused on the protection of human rights, the promotion of equality and justice, and the importance of international cooperation in achieving the Sustainable Development Goals.

Conferences and forums held across the world highlighted the role of human rights in fostering peace, trust among nations, and social progress.

In Turkmenistan, special events emphasized the significance of human rights in state policy and the advancement of humanitarian values.

International Human Rights Day serves not only as a reminder of a historic milestone but also as a call to uphold dignity and safeguard the rights of every individual in today's world.
