He predicts fatigue from AI due to its excessive use in smartphones and doubts that AI-focused devices will gain mass popularity.

Foldable smartphones, in his opinion, will also remain niche due to their high cost. Pei believes that the success of such devices is possible only with a significant reduction in prices.

On the global stage, he says the US will enter a “Golden Age,” while Europe will continue to lose influence.

The Indian stock market will face temporary difficulties but will subsequently grow. Apple will remain a reliable investment, although it may face fluctuations due to high expectations.

Pei emphasizes changing consumer preferences, suggesting that 2025 will be a year of rethinking technology and its role in everyday life.